David Letterman – still the talk of New York

In January this year, David Letterman underwent a quintuple heart bypass operation at a New York hospital. For many Americans, this was tantamount to the Statue of Liberty being carried off for urgent repair work, for Letterman is an icon of roughly the same stature.

A celebrated oddball with an ego the size of Staten Island, he may not win many friends but he certainly knows how to influence people. On his CBS talk show, Late Show with

David Letterman, he once complained about a dangerously large pot-hole on Manhattan's East 53rd Street. The following day, Mayor Rudolph Giuliani donned a hard-hat and filled it in himself. And still on the subject of New York, Hillary Clinton's battle against Giuliani to secure a Senate seat was beginning to falter until she designed to appear on Letterman's show. Aided by Dave – as he is affectionately known from Alabama to Wyoming – she gave a solid wisecracking performance, and suddenly the campaign was back on track.

A few days later, the 52-year-old Letterman was unexpectedly rushed into hospital. Fortunately, the bypass was successful, and he is now back at work, if anything more irreverent than ever. There used to be an unwritten code of behaviour decreeing that he would not make cracks about his NBC rival, the comedian Jay Leno, host of The Tonight Show, but Letterman seems to have left such sensibilities on the operating table, perhaps reckoning that life is too short not to rubbish one's rivals.

He and Leno go way back. In fact, in the early Eighties, Letterman helped to revive Leno's flagging career, frequently inviting him on his show, which was then on NBC, called Late Night with David Letterman. But with the retirement of Johnny Carson, host of The Tonight Show and for decades the king of American late-night television, the fortunes of the two men shifted. Letterman desperately wanted to take over The Tonight Show. So did Leno. But NBC bosses were worried that Letterman's act might be too racy for The Tonight Show's earlier slot. Leno got the job, and Letterman, affronted, declared that he no longer wished to work at NBC.

Other networks queued up to woo him. And as a mark of how valuable he was considered to be, the Fox deputation was led by Rupert Murdoch himself, who offered Letterman up to $15 million a year. However, Letterman plumped for CBS, and quickly proved that he could adjust to the earlier time without forfeiting his celebrated zaniness – one of his first guests was a four-year-old boy who could bite the shape of every American state out of pieces of cheese.

Late Show with David Letterman, ITV2, weekdays, 11.00pm

Liza's the new (She's Gotta Have) It Girl

She might not be quite as famous as another showbiz daughter called Liza, nor quite as svelte, but she is twice as sorted. Perhaps it helped that she had Jimmy Tarbuck for a dad (Dick Emery once said that Tarbuck was the only happy comedian he knew) rather than Judy Garland for a mum. I am talking, of course, of Lizas Minnelli and Tarbuck. The former has, at times, let life get on top of her, whereas Liza T seems to have got firmly on top of life, taking success and failure equally in her stride. She was admirably phlegmatic when young Kelly Brook beat her to the job of co-hosting Channel 4's The Big Breakfast, even though she had successfully filled in when Denise Van Outen was away.

'You know what?' she cheerfully told the nation's press, who wanted to hear how gutted she was. 'Getting up that early really messes around with your bowels, and I'm a great believer in regular movement.'

So perhaps it's safe to say that television's gain is her digestive system's loss, because Liza duly succeeded Kelly Brook on The Big Breakfast, on which she is a brilliant foil for Johnny Vaughan, and she also makes an engaging presenter of the fashion series She's Gotta Have It. As far as telly is concerned, whatever it is that one's gotta have, she's clearly got it. She's Gotta Have It, Living, weekdays, 1.30pm, 7.30pm

Around the world of Planet Palin

Michael Palin has many claims to fame, not least the fact that John Cleese chose him, stuffed, as his luxury item on Desert Island Discs. Not yet stuffed, and certainly far from stuffy, 57-year-old Palin is currently at work on his second novel. 'I am having a rather static year,' he tells me, at his comfortable North London home, and I can't say I blame him. The last time I saw him he was not long back from China, where he was feted at a banquet in a town on the Yangtze River. He described being given a strange rubbery thing covered in a thick sauce. 'Nobody told me what it was,' recalled Palin. 'But after I'd eaten it, the cameraman said: "That was brave of you." "What was?" I asked. "Eating that bull's penis," he replied.' Coincidentally, bulls also featured in another Palin project, the BBC series Michael Palin's Hemingway Adventure, in which he followed the travels of the sometime matador Ernest Hemingway.

The series was inspired by Palin's acclaimed first novel, Hemingway's

Chair, which I have read, and which demonstrates a remarkably detailed knowledge of the great American novelist. So when, I wonder, did Hemingway first light his fire?

'I read him as part of my A-Level English Literature course in the Fifties,' Palin tells me. 'I was pleased that he was still around, because all the other authors we studied had died before about 1603. For Whom the Bell Tolls had a big effect on me. For one thing, it was different to all the other books I had read about war, which were usually about digging out of Germany or escaping in a plane you'd made yourself in the attic. Also, there was one naughty bit in it, the sleeping-bag scene on page 287.'

Sadly, the naughty bit was not dramatised in Michael Palin's Hemingway Adventure – which did not, incidentally, receive the same critical praise as some of Palin's previous travel programmes. 'No, some of the reviews were very unpleasant,' he recalls with a grimace. 'We got some real muggings.' Still, what do the critics know? Around the World in 80 Days, his hit series that was inspired by Jules Verne's novel, was at first 'scornfully dismissed'. Even Monty Python was generally ignored when it first came out. 'Not until much, much later did people write that Python changed the face of comedy,' says Palin.

Characteristically, though, he is candid about the flaws in the Hemingway series. 'Some things were perhaps a little muddled,' he says, 'but we were still proud of it and were pretty amazed by the bad reviews. We thought we had done a good job.' They certainly unearthed some interesting characters, including Hemingway's Cuban boatman, now 101, 'who gives interviews every 15 minutes for £50 a time'. Thankfully, Palin himself comes a little cheaper. Planet Palin on UK Horizons:

VIC GOES SOLO

Monks, cutlery and whistling – we've all pondered their significance in the grand scheme of things, and now Vic Reeves can set the record straight

EXACTLY WHAT goes on inside the brain of comedy cult hero Vic Reeves?

There'll be a chance to find out this summer as Reeves presents his own new show for UK Play, Vic Reeves Examines. This will be the first solo television project for Reeves (aka Jim Moir), following a string of series with his long-term sidekick Bob Mortimer – including Shooting Stars, The Smell of Reeves and Mortimer and, most recently, an update of the classic Sixties detective series Randall and Hopkirk (Deceased).

Fans of Reeves and Mortimer's bizarre brand of comedy are unlikely to be disappointed, since a sneak preview of the show's subject matter reveals a familiarly strange selection of material.

Each week, Reeves will be joined by a studio guest to discuss a particular topic that's on his mind. He will be dispensing his own peculiar insights into controversial subjects such as night farts, underwater fish people, cuddling, bad words, volcanoes, small people driving cars, monks, whistling and, of course, darts.

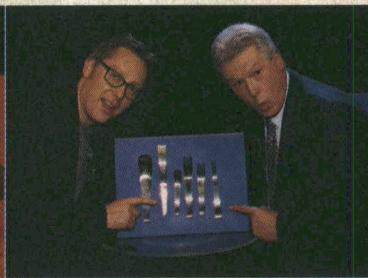

Guests slated to appear on the show include Kate Thornton, John Craven, Jenny Powell and Bob Holness, and Vic will be using his extensive knowledge of the music industry to complement the discussions with appropriate music videos.

Thus, to accompany the programme about night farts, he has chosen soft rock classic Wind of Change by The Scorpions as well as the ballad Wild Is the Wind by David Bowie.

Filming started on the 13-part series in March, and it is scheduled to screen in July.

In the hot seat: Jenny Powell, John Craven and Kate Thornton join Vic to discuss dog dirt, cutlery and night wind

WATCH OUT!

● David 'Mulder' Duchovny is joined by a familiar face in a forthcoming episode of The X-Files. His wife, Téa Leoni (left, with Duchovny), makes an appearance as herself in an episode entitled 'Hollywood A.D.', to be shown on Sky One in June or July. Téa, star of blockbuster Deep Impact, is joined in the episode by Garry Shandling, who also stars as himself.

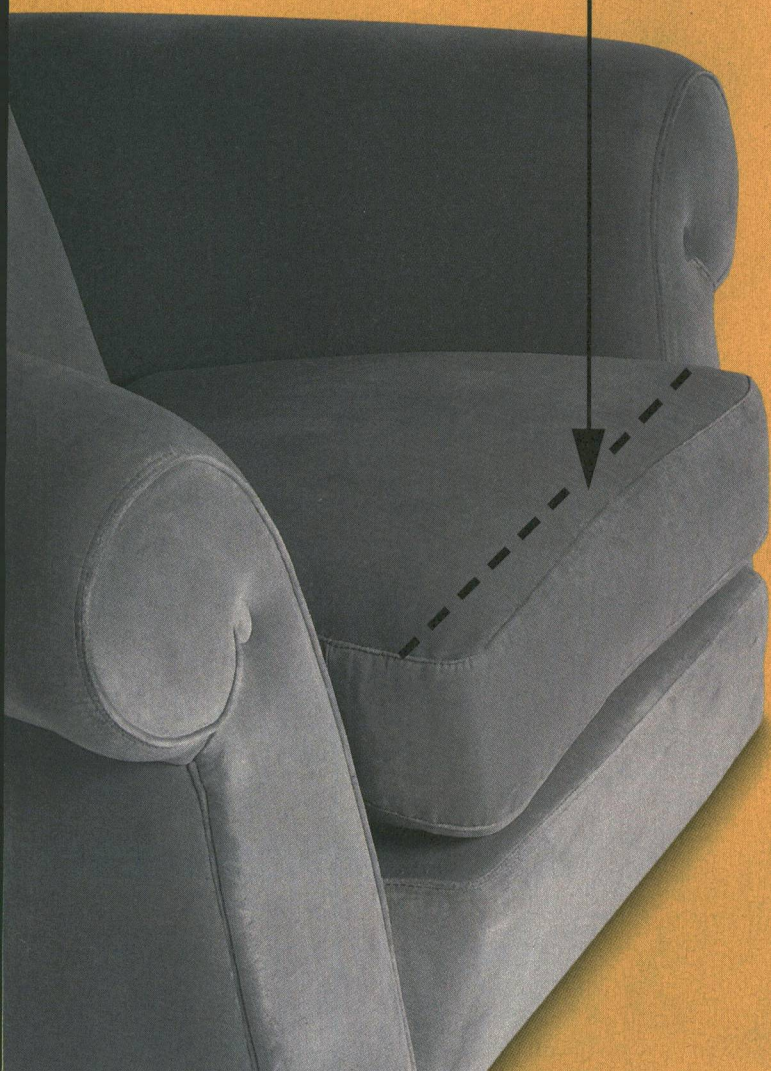

● Hosted by the biking, black-belted, and, needless-to-say, eccentric, Reverend Lionel Fanthorpe, Fortean TV explores the world of bizarre beliefs, strange phenomena and the just plain bonkers. The oddities set to appear in the series on Sci-Fi in June include a magnetic Taiwanese family and fish who can miraculously cure skin diseases. Wonders never cease!

● Football and romance – some might say a heavenly combination. Certainly for co-stars Neil Morrissey and Rachel Weisz, My Summer with Des ignited passion both on and off the set of the romantic comedy. Morrissey plays Martin, a football fanatic whose life isn't running smoothly. But during Euro '96 he meets the mysterious Rosie (Weisz) and both his and the England team's prospects start looking up. On UK Gold next month, My Summer with Des also features the drama's namesake – the delightful Des Lynam.

'Notting Hill made

A hilarious script – and the promise of a $15m pay packet – lured Julia Roberts to London to star opposite Hugh Grant in the hit romantic comedy Notting Hill. The film put a smile on her face after several box-office duds.

Interview: Garth Pearce

PHOTOS: SANTÉ D'ORAZIO/CORBIS OUTLINE, POLYGRAM

me laugh out loud'

REEL life meets real life in the smash hit romantic comedy Notting Hill as Julia Roberts, Hollywood's top female star, plays (you've guessed it) a leading Hollywood star. The role might not have been a huge stretch for 32-year-old Roberts, but it certainly helped put her big-screen career firmly back on track.

The Georgia-born actress had previously suffered a succession of critical failures and box-office disappointments. For every My Best Friend's Wedding and The Pelican Brief there was an I Love Trouble and a Mary Reilly (the latter being a dour spin on the Jekyll and Hyde story in which Roberts played an implausibly dowdy maid with an odd 'Oirish' accent). But Notting Hill came to the rescue with a plum role for Roberts opposite Hugh Grant's struggling London bookseller, William. She falls for him and he for her – the untouchable, glam superstar with the identifiable everyman.

In a way, the on-screen relationship between Roberts and Grant is a reversal of that between the leading characters in Pretty Woman, the film which launched her career ten years ago. In that smartly funny hybrid of Cinderella and George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion, the Oscar-nominated Roberts played a prostitute who is bowled over by the wealth and influence of a powerful businessman (Richard Gere). But in Notting Hill, her character, Anna Scott, is clearly in charge, as Grant portrays his trademark flustered, stuttering Englishman.

It all works, thanks largely to a wonderfully observant script, although Roberts was not immediately bowled over by the project. 'I did not have any great expectations,' she admits. 'I had been given a very brief synopsis and it sounded unappealing. But when I read it, from the very start, I was hooked. She goes into a bookshop, likes this man with so many problems and gives him a kiss. I was totally charmed and could not resist agreeing to do the film.'

It all sounds simple. But when producer Duncan Kenworthy originally attempted to contact Roberts, the star's agent refused to take his phone calls. He then discovered that a new spin had been put on Hollywood's already daunting rules of engagement.

There is no chance of getting a major star to even read a script these days, unless a firm financial offer is attached. But with Roberts, an offer had to be made before her agent would even speak on the telephone. 'It was the only way we could get them to take us seriously,' recalls Kenworthy, who also produced Four Weddings and a Funeral.

That Notting Hill was scripted by Four Weddings writer Richard Curtis also cut little ice, despite the fact that Roberts once called him a genius during an interview. The word was that she liked the script enough to want to meet. It led to Kenworthy, Curtis and director Roger Michell flying to New York, where the star held court at an Italian restaurant. Only after rewrites of the script, which included adding funnier lines for her character, did she agree to do the role. The cost? Around $15m dollars.

'I can see how absurd these sums are,' Roberts tells me. 'But some men are getting them, so why not women? At a certain point, it is like a game of Monopoly. I get the offer and say: "What? Okay, great." I will call my mum and tell her. It just seems silly. It does not make me a better actor.'

It certainly makes her a richer one. And, to be fair, she does deliver the goods in Notting Hill. The film simply wouldn't have worked without a big international star in the lead. Even so, Roberts insists that she is nothing like Scott. 'She had some insecurities which I could not identify with,' the actress says. 'How she felt about things was way beyond my experience. Not until the end of the movie would she be close to being a friend of mine.'

One plotline in Notting Hill seems to annoy her. The British tabloids discover nude photographs of Anna Scott, for which she had posed early in her career. It results in a paparazzi feeding-frenzy after she leaves her hotel and seeks sanctuary at the home of Grant's character in Notting Hill. 'I did not agree with how she got into such a mess,' Roberts says. 'I would never have done so. I don't like how she dealt with the whole thing, by freaking out.' Yet the press clamour in the film seems to mirror that which greeted Roberts in 1991, when she jilted actor Kiefer Sutherland before their marriage. She dodged journalists and photographers and sought anonymity. Was it a case of Anna's predicament being too close to reality? 'I did not recognise any such thing,' she says, sharply.

A list of her reported boyfriends features several actors: Liam Neeson, Dylan McDermott, Jason Patric, Matthew Perry. And there was the surprise wedding to country singer Lyle Lovett in 1993, which lasted just 21 months. She is currently dating Benjamin Bratt, an actor – best known for his role as Detective Reynaldo Curtis in the TV series Law & Order – who is soon to be seen alongside Madonna in The Next Big Thing. 'I have been able to build up relationships without interference,' insists Roberts. 'Anna Scott seems to have a struggle.'

So what is Julia Roberts really like? She is full of charm and energy. Her brown eyes are enormous, her skin luminous and her smile really does dazzle at 12 paces.

But this pleasant demeanour is at odds with her reputation for being something of a control freak. There's a sense of her wishing to be in charge at all times. The crew on Notting Hill were asked to sign a 'confidentiality clause' which legally prevented them from making any public comments about Roberts, either during or after filming. It seemed an unnecessary caution, since even those who spoke of her non-attributably, usually praised her professionalism. Whatever her motives, it has paid off handsomely. She's the first woman to break the $20m wage barrier for her forthcoming movie, the fact-based legal drama Erin Brockovich.

'Notting Hill made me laugh out loud,' she says. 'I liked the idea that this Hollywood star is considered to have the answer for everything when she's really working out what to do next and hasn't a clue. Just like me.' But, with her career hiccups apparently behind her, Roberts seems to know exactly what she's doing.

Blonde Girl in the ring

As the WWF bandwagon hits Britain this month, Chris Price gets to grips with high-kicking wrestling sensation Tori. Pictures: Simon Rowe

THINK of a WWF wrestler and the image that most people have is of a hulking man mountain. They certainly wouldn't imagine wrestling to be the vocation of an attractive, 30-something woman.

But enigmatic female wrestler Tori isn't one for convenient stereotypes. Out of costume and out of the ring she could easily be mistaken for a high-powered businesswoman or Julia Roberts's stunt double. It's difficult to imagine that she makes her living by appearing in staged catfights and throwing other women around.

What's even more unusual is that Tori didn't enjoy any kind of physical activity as a child. 'I used to do anything to try to get out of it, even write my own excuse notes,' she confesses. It wasn't until her parents joined a gym that she found herself drawn to bodybuilding.

'There wasn't a plan,' she says. 'All the good things in my life, like bodybuilding and wrestling, have just happened. It's a passion which comes from inside you.' Indeed, it was Tori's passion for bodybuilding which later led to her joining the Ladies' Professional Wrestling Association in Portland, Oregon, and from there to Japan, where she was schooled in her trade for two years.

'I wasn't a particularly good wrestler at the time. But I certainly found out what blood, sweat and tears were all about.'

the professional scene in Japan, where the emphasis is on strength and wrestling skill, in America the sport is much more about entertainment. 'It's become more like a very violent soap opera,' she says.

Like most wrestlers, Tori has had her fair share of injuries. She's broken her ankles, her nose and has had surgery three times on a damaged left knee. And it was after her worst injury (a dislocated shoulder which put her out of action when she came back from Japan) that Tori discovered her passion for bodypainting. She is currently working with artist and photographer Leroy Roper, who spends hours painting her body with fantastic designs. In his latest post-apocalyptic series of pictures Tori appears as half-human and half-machine!

'It's great,' she enthuses. 'We turn on some music and produce this beautiful work of art. The only thing is that the paint cracks as soon as you try to move.' For Tori, looking good outside the ring is as important to her success as her appearance inside it. Although she no longer does bodybuilding she still keeps in shape at the gym and also by going to yoga classes several times a week. Her fitness regime is complemented by a diet of non-fatty foods which helps keep her toned for her live performances. But surely she must feel the desire to spoil herself every once in a while?

'No, not really. A glass of wine is nice but I never find myself indulging. You lose your taste for fat. To put something salty or fatty in my mouth makes me gag. I grew up on a diet of fatty sandwiches and now I think:

"What was I doing?"'

Not only does staying fit and healthy give Tori the edge she needs for her high-energy performances, it also means she looks good for her predominantly young male audience.

Clearly, however, the on-stage character is nothing like the real-life Tori. 'A sort of metamorphosis goes on. The real me would be far too shy to go out there and wrestle.' She also admits to being deeply superstitious and putting the left side of her clothes on first before she goes out to perform.

Though romantically linked with several wrestlers on screen (such as Kane and X-Pac), in real life Tori is settled with long-term partner Matthew.

The couple live on a yacht and Tori's only regret about her high-profile career is that she can't spend more time with her man. 'I've been on the road for two months now but am looking forward to getting back. I see more of the WWF than I do of Matthew and my dogs!'

You can see Tori in WWF Insurrextion, Saturday 6 May, 7.30pm live from London's Earls Court, on Sky Box Office. To order this event, call 0500 601055

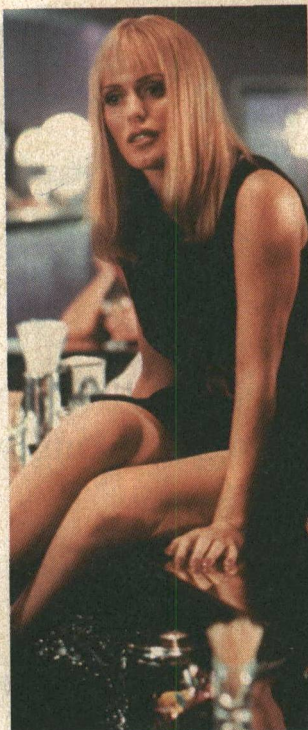

George Best's recent illness has been a source of widespread sadness.

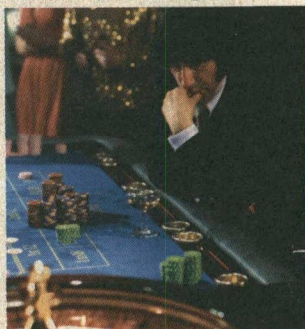

A new film of his life is a timely reminder of his sporting greatness.

A life of TWO HALVES

FRIDAY 12TH
9.00PM

THE history of football on the big screen is littered with spectacular own goals. So when actor John Lynch approached George Best and told him he wanted to turn his remarkable life story into a cinematic venture, the man himself could be forgiven for being a little wary.

'I told him the big problem was always going to be – as with most sporting films – trying to find actors who can play the sport, or sportsmen who can act, and there are not many combinations of that,' said the 53-year-old, Belfast-born Best before his recent illness.

'I've seen some sporting films that have been embarrassing, to say the least. Yesterday's Hero – which they denied was based on me – was definitely embarrassing. I told John that I thought there have only been two really great sporting films – This Sporting Life and Raging Bull. That was my concern.'

His doubts must have been lessened by the fact that Lynch – a respected actor who has starred in films such as In the Name of the Father and Sliding Doors – has assembled a fine cast to tell the remarkable story of Best's turbulent life.

Born in Coventry and raised in Northern Ireland, Lynch is a self-confessed fan who has idolised George Best since he first watched flickering television pictures of the young forward in his prime, mesmerising defences and scoring incredible goals for the star-studded Manchester United team of the Sixties.

'I remember George vividly,' says Lynch. 'I think there have only been three truly great soccer players – Maradona, Pele and George Best – and George is really an icon of British life. He was born with an exceptional gift and there will never be another player like him.'

Lynch and his wife, Mary McGuckian, came across a video of a documentary about Best when they were moving house back in 1994. 'We watched it and it just made me realise, once again, what an amazing story his life is. And that's when we first started to think that maybe we could make it into a film.'

McGuckian directed the movie and Lynch stars as Best, with two of his old pals from drama school days – Jerome Flynn and Linus Roache – cast in key roles as Bobby Charlton and Denis Law respectively. Ian Hart plays Nobby Stiles and the late Ian Bannen plays the Reds' legendary manager, Sir Matt Busby.

The cast also includes a host of famous names who were happy to play cameo roles – Patsy Kensit, Stephen Fry, Clive Anderson, model Sophie Dahl, Roger Daltrey – and former United and Chelsea player Ray Wilkins, who helped coach the actors for the football scenes.

'They used a lot of original footage of George intercut with close-ups on us as the players,' explains Roache. 'We would look at a set play and then Ray [Wilkins] would coach us so that we could recreate it. John is a really good player and Jerome is pretty useful too.'

Best's supreme skills are, of course, only a part of his story. As everybody knows, he has led a life that can accurately be described as eventful. As well as winning two league titles, a European Cup and being named European Footballer of the Year in 1968, there have been battles with booze, dalliances with some of the most beautiful women in the world, court cases and – tragically for United fans – a departure from Old Trafford when he was just 26 which, many believed, led to him squandering his precious gift.

'George's story is a classic one of rags to riches, of height and depth, joy and despair,' says Lynch, warming to his theme. 'He was given everything and yet remained empty. He tried to fill his emptiness with alcohol, but it almost destroyed him. He exasperated all around him, he broke and defied everything he was given, found love and called it hate. He terrorised his gift and scorned the world. Yet when he played football, forgiveness and wonder sprang to our lips.'

Best himself has given his seal of approval to the project and agreed that the film should be a warts-and-all portrayal of his life. 'I told John that there was no point in hiding anything,' he says. 'It's all well documented anyway. I appreciate the fact that he asked for my input.'

When we meet, Best is visiting the film set. A hotel in Liverpool is being used to recreate the night of triumph when, in 1965, United beat Benfica on their home turf 5-1, with Best scoring two magnificent goals. The next day the local press dubbed him 'El Beatle'.

'I've just seen John on set as me, so to speak, for the first time,' says Best. 'And it's uncanny how close he's got to me, physically. It's actually a little bit weird to see him walking around like that. I have to detach myself from it a bit.'

'Jerome Flynn looks uncannily like Bobby and Linus really looks like Denis. It's quite spooky really, especially when the people they are portraying are still close friends of mine. A lot of the old players have been saying to me: "Who's playing me?" and "What's it going to be like?" – I think there are a few of them panicking at the moment!'

The least panicky of all is Best himself. On set, the actors are clearly in awe of him and delighted to get the chance to meet a living legend. These days, of course, it would take a lot to faze Best, who was enjoying one of the happiest periods of his life before his recent health scare. He has been married to his second wife, Alex, a former air stewardess, for nearly five years and she has brought a new contentment, he says. He is pleased, too, with his work – earning a lucrative living as a Sky Sports soccer pundit and an after-dinner speaker.

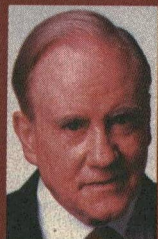

'I am happy,' he said. 'I mean, all my adult life I've had people saying: "The way he's going, he won't reach 30." And then it was 40, 50 and now it's probably 60. But I'm still around and hopefully I will be for quite a while yet. Most of the people who told me that are now dead. And that makes me feel a lot better ...'

JOHN LYNCH plays GEORGE BEST

'Being Northern Irish, a rabid soccer fan and a Manchester United supporter had nothing whatsoever to do with my desire to play this role!' laughs Lynch. 'Seriously, before a word was written we wooed George with our idea. We found a man who was still fiercely loyal to the love of his life, namely Manchester

United, and a man who had braved his many personal storms and was ready and happy for his story to be told. Both Mary [McGuckian, the director of Best] and I thank him for that.'

IAN BANNEN plays SIR MATT BUSBY

'I'm a Celtic boy at heart, so Manchester United is traditionally enemy territory,' said the late Ian Bannen, who was killed in a car accident last year. 'But there is something about George Best's beautiful talent that transcends team allegiances. He was magic to watch, like a butterfly. I'm fascinated by Sir

Matt and came to know him very well through this film. He was a wonderful manager and had an easy, charming manner. He knew everything about football and footballers. His relationship with George was perhaps too close. If he had been more of a disciplinarian then maybe he would have been able to prevent George from self-destruction. But the two were very close and remained so throughout Sir Matt's life.'

JEROME FLYNN plays BOBBY CHARLTON

'I'm a Tottenham fan but I think everybody has a lot of feeling for that incredible Manchester United team of the Sixties. Initially [playing Bobby Charlton] was inhibiting. I wasn't trying to do an impersonation of him, but I wanted to do him justice. They did a great job with my hair, so that helped, Linus got Denis Law down to a tee and John looked amazing. Bobby was a fantastic player and is a great ambassador for the game of football. I decided I wasn't going to be intimidated by it. I sat down and watched all this footage of Manchester United from that time and it's such a great story. Seeing the terrible tragedy of the Munich air crash and the effect that had on Bobby's life, I wanted to meet him but, for some reason, he wasn't interested.'

IAN HART plays NOBBY STILES

'Nobby Stiles was already pretty well established when George joined the United team. Best had all this talent and all he did was drink and abuse his gift, while Stiles was desperately trying to maintain fitness.

I suppose there was a certain amount of jealousy on Nobby's part. Not in a negative way, but I guess he was thinking: "If only I had those legs ...". Off the pitch Nobby was always described as being very calm, quiet and polite, but on the pitch, he turned into a complete nutter – shouting his head off and directing the team.'

LINUS ROACHE plays DENIS LAW

Linus Roache would love to meet the man he plays. 'I've never met Denis, but I have watched lots of footage. He has a very witty, dry quality, he makes you laugh and tells great stories. I'd love to meet the guy. In this film, Denis Law is the closest character to George Best. Law stands by him right until the eleventh hour. When the rest of the team are all fed up with his womanising and drinking, Denis is much more sympathetic. There is no sense of rivalry between the two.'

IT'S THE WEEKEND
FRIDAYS-SUNDAYS
FROM MAY 12TH
SEE LISTINGS
FOR TIMES

Julia Carling and Gideon Coe are teaming up to present It's the Weekend, a new music magazine featuring video exclusives, news, reviews and interviews with current artists. But not before they've faced the music in the Cable Guide questionnaire ...

What's spinning on your CD player at the moment?

Gideon: Mojave 3, the Shazam, Myracle Brah, the Clash (always), Nat King Cole, Ian Dury (RIP), Cotton Mather, The Members, Horace Andy and Grand Drive.

What's the worst album you've ever bought?

Julia: Probably Pinky & Perky, but what a classic!

What was the first album you ever bought?

Gideon: The Adventures of Barbar the Elephant narrated by Peter Ustinov, though the first rock'n'roll one was Live and Dangerous by Thin Lizzy.

Who was your first pop idol?

Julia: David Cassidy, but it was fairly short-lived and it soon changed to Donny Osmond and then onto Marc Bolan. I loved the TV show The Partridge Family with David Cassidy, and he was cute! Strangely enough he came over to present the weekend show with me on VH1 two or three years ago and I was dumbstruck!

Do you have any hidden musical talents we should know about?

Gideon: I play guitar, but you shouldn't know about it.

What song holds special memories for you?

Julia: Dolce Vita by Ryan Paris because it reminds me of leaving school and freedom. Yes, I know it's naff but I love it, so if anyone has it on CD, can I buy it please?

Do you have a particularly embarrassing music-related moment?

Gideon: I once went to book tickets to see James at Birmingham Odeon having seen a sign which read 'James Last Tickets Available'. I soon found out this referred to the legendary easy listening conductor, James Last.

What was the last gig you went to?

Julia: Macy Gray at Wembley Arena.

Who is your favourite artist/band of all time?

Gideon: The Clash. Five great albums, the ability to harness and mix styles, the best debut LP ever – in fact, the best album ever, Sandinista. Great live band. Nobody touched them – or walked like them.

Who are you looking forward to having on the show?

Julia: I would like to have Bryan Adams on the show and talk about his book on photography.

If you could interview anyone from the music business past or present, who would it be?

Gideon: Elvis – because he's the King.

Julia: Elvis in his tight leather trousers phase because he was so cool.

What's the worst crime of fashion you've committed in the name of music fandom?

Gideon: 1984: army trousers with side pockets stuffed to the brim à la Joe Strummer. I also went through a stage of looking like a Japan reject – though not intentionally.

What's been your most outrageous piece of rock'n'roll style behaviour?

Julia: Drinking too much on the way to Wembley to see the Stones, and having to run into people's houses to use their toilet on more than one occasion!

If you could choose a piece of music to be the soundtrack to your life, what would it be?

Gideon: Life Is Sweet by Maria McKee.

Ahead of their time: Keanu Reeves and Carrie-Anne Moss (right) discover the world isn't quite as it seems in The Matrix

The reluctant SUPERSTAR

Action-packed blockbuster The Matrix revived Keanu Reeves's fortunes on the big screen. But the Hollywood sex symbol would much rather be on the road with his rock band ...

Words: Garth Pearce

KEANU Reeves is back where he hates to be – in the spotlight. Despite fame, wealth, good looks and a career that is riding high again, he suffers from a private shyness which does not sit easily with Hollywood tradition.

The Matrix, winner of four Oscars, has brought him renewed success. Reeves plays Neo, a computer hacker who discovers that his 20th-century world is the creation of a giant computer, the Matrix. He and others are allowed to believe it is still 1999 but, in reality, it is 200 years in the future. Earth has been taken over by machines of advanced cyber intelligence that want to keep humans as slaves. Are you with it so far?

Morpheus (Laurence Fishburne) has been searching for a 'chosen one' to destroy the Matrix and Neo fits the bill. He is joined by Trinity (Carrie-Anne Moss) in the fight to overthrow the machines and reclaim our world.

Nonsense? Perhaps. But the film, with stunning special effects created in the new Twentieth Century Fox studios in Sydney, Australia, worked so well that it became last year's surprise hit. After a succession of flops, Reeves, 35, chose well.

'I just felt that if the special effects and on-screen graphics could match the sort of thing described in the script, we would have something that could capture the imagination,' he says. 'It was also a clever idea. Are we always going to be in control of computers – or will they take over our lives?'

It came at a point for Reeves when hits such as Bram Stoker's Dracula were becoming a distant memory. Instead he had delivered flops like Johnny Mnemonic and Feeling Minnesota. Also, who could forget his awful performance, amid such British brilliance, in Kenneth Branagh's Much Ado About Nothing?

However, Reeves obviously knew what he was doing. He rejected Speed 2 – to the amazement of Hollywood – opting to tour with his rock band, Dogstar. A wise choice. The sequel virtually killed Jason Patric's film career and even Sandra Bullock couldn't save the terrible script.

So what is it like being back? He's not sure. 'I have tried to steer clear of gossip columns, have purposely avoided photographs with girlfriends and have kept my private life to myself,' he says. 'It is getting easier. I live a dull life away from the bright lights and parties. The dangers in my life have been limited to a couple of motorbike crashes and a fall from a tree, when I was a kid.'

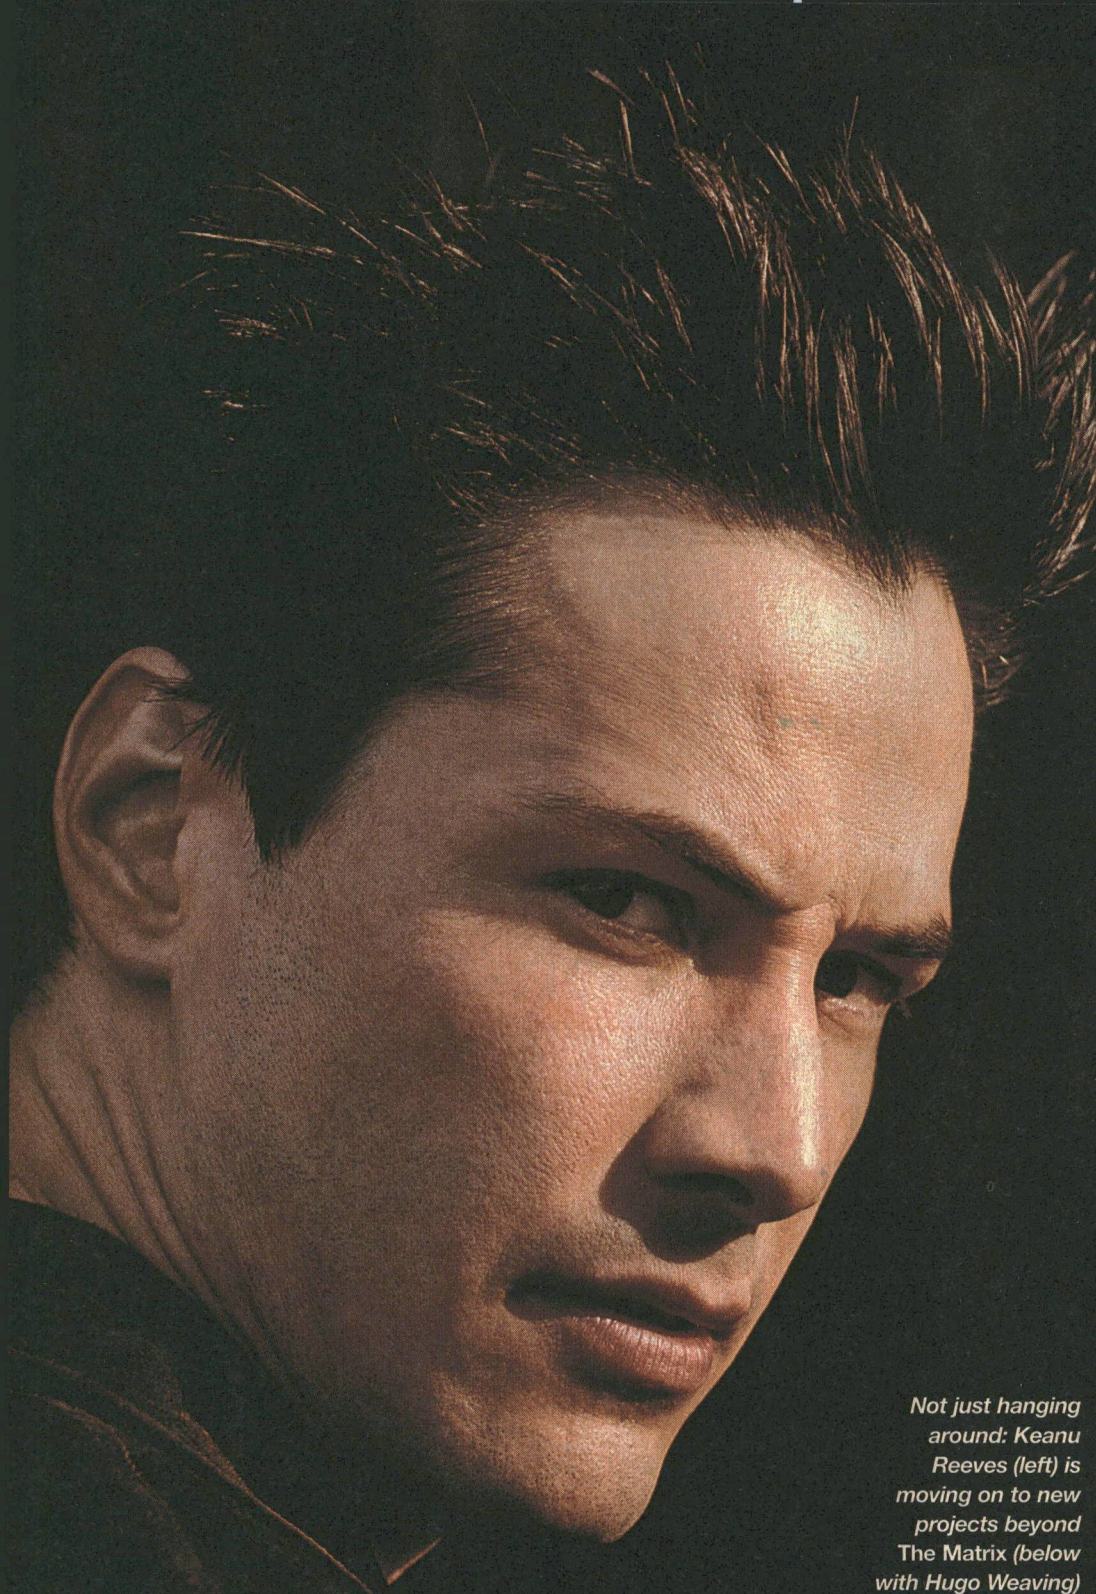

After starring in only a handful of films during the last four years, including The Matrix, Reeves will be releasing four during the coming year: The Gift, Driven, The Replacements and Sweet November. He is also due to start work on The Matrix 2 very soon.

'I enjoyed the time away from so-called success,' he explains. 'The truth is that I would prefer to be a full-time musician rather than act. I am just not so successful at it. But to play a bass guitar on stage and create music gives me such a kick.'

Reeves, wearing black jeans and a black T-shirt, cuts a simple figure. 'I do have a problem with this whole showbusiness thing,' he says. 'It is thought to be unusual for an actor, but I think it is more general than people realise. I feel more comfortable in the role I am playing, rather than anything on the outside. I like to think I am a free spirit. A lot of us think like that – even though we don't talk about it.'

It runs in the family. Reeves was brought up by his mother, Patricia, who had left her Essex home in the Sixties and met his father, Sam, a Chinese-Hawaiian, while travelling the world. Keanu (pronounced Kee-an-oo, which means 'cool breeze over the mountains') was born in Beirut, spent time in Australia and New York and then lived from the age of seven with his mother and sister, Kim, in Toronto, Canada.

His father walked out of the family at this time. The two of them have not met in years. Reeves tells me: 'I do not want to talk about it. There has been so much rubbish written about our relationship in recent years, I do not want to add to it.'

One untrue allegation which has dogged him is that he does not like women. The rumours are an example of how Hollywood can turn if it feels one of its anointed stars isn't playing the game.

Although he does not wish to discuss it, he has recently split up with his girlfriend, Jennifer Syme. 'I have not been seen around with a woman, because I don't always go to the right receptions, parties and restaurants,' says Reeves. 'It's just that I don't go out – period.'

'The things I do for fun would bore most people. I love looking at the ocean or desert, going on long hikes in the mountains, and I work on my Shakespeare. Any vices? I like red wine, but I never took refuge in it. And I've experimented with drugs – [but] never as a lifestyle. That's the difference between me and others. It is not in my nature to get hooked on anything.'

A count of Reeves's appearances on the big-screen reveals the surprising fact he has been in more than 30 films; including Dangerous Liaisons, Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure and Point Break, which gave him his high profile in the first place.

It is good to see him back. He speaks real sense in the wake of The Matrix. 'I don't use a computer because I don't trust them,' he explains. 'An expert hacker can tap into any system and get anything out of it.'

'We are just developing problems for ourselves in the future, since our lives will be in the hands of a comparatively small number of people.'

Gill Power

At the vanguard of the new wave of Hollywood horror in the Fifties was the Elvis Presley of movie monsters – the Creature from the Black Lagoon

HAD the classic Universal Studios monsters of the Thirties and Forties – Dracula, the Frankenstein Monster, the Mummy, the Wolf Man – been the creature feature equivalent of Frank Sinatra's Rat Pack, then the Creature from the Black Lagoon would have been Elvis. The original monster cycle, from Dracula in 1931 to Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein in 1948, took its creatures from gothic literature, European folk tales and German silent movies. Within a few years, that kind of horror movie was dead. A new decade rejected full moon curses and abandoned crumbling castles for pristine laboratories and the mysteries of atomic science. The Fifties was a great decade for monster movies, but the creatures were less romantic, less tragic, and arguably more dangerous. In place of vampires, werewolves and mummies, we were assaulted by armies of giant ants, aliens, dinosaurs revived by nuclear blasts or mutated by-products of ill-thought-out experiments.

The Creature from the Black Lagoon, more correctly known as the Gill Man, is the only American Fifties monster to achieve anything like the iconic status of the earlier Universal fiends. He (it?) appears as model kits, glow-in-the-dark figures, T-shirts and a horde of other items. Only Japan's Godzilla comes close to being such a merchandising phenomenon.

Obviously, the Creature wouldn't have become a star if his first film hadn't been a hit. Directed by Jack Arnold in 1954, Creature from the Black Lagoon is the best-loved of a series of monster movies made by Universal-International in the Fifties. They had the kind of lurid subject matter associated with drive-in flicks, but were made with all the flair of a dream factory studio. Some of the decade's monster movies drag until the monster shows up and are ridiculous afterwards. But Universal's production values were high enough to keep the suspense going and the Creature was a truly impressive creation – not just some stuntman in a waterlogged sack with ping-pong-ball eyes.

The plot is simple. A skeletal hand discovered in the Amazon convinces scientists that there exists in the remote Black Lagoon a living prehistoric specimen which represents an evolutionary stage between fish and man. An expedition is put together, highlighting a romantic triangle between hero Richard Carlson, glory-seeking antagonist Richard Denning and bathing beauty Julia Adams. They go to the Black Lagoon, discover the Gill Man, suffer losses, but fight off the monster, though not before it has expressed desire for the girl.

The dialogue and characterisations are above B-movie standards, and the actors make conventional scenes play well. But Arnold's real success is in the atmosphere. The backlot is covered in foliage to create an impressive jungle hell, and the good ship Rita chug-chugs across the glassy surface of the lagoon in true African Queen fashion. The underwater scenes remain definitive, with the curvy Adams floating on the surface and dangling her long white legs above the Creature's claws, and the Gill Man performing an underwater ballet beneath her pin-up form. Few Fifties sci-fi films bothered with sex, and this remains as classic an image of impossible love as King Kong and his tiny blonde. It may be that this was the ingredient that made the film more than just another monster romp for the kids.

River dance: the Creature is about to perform an 'underwater ballet'

Jack Arnold returned for a sequel, Revenge of the Creature, in 1955, but John Sherwood took over for 1956's final instalment The Creature Walks among Us.

Uniquely, the Creature was never seen to die and was always glimpsed sinking to the depths or swimming out to sea. One would like to think he is still out there.

IN THE FRAME

MATT LUCAS

What is your favourite film?
Singin' in the Rain. I absolutely love musicals and particularly that one. I know it's a cliché, but my favourite moment in the film is where Gene Kelly is sloshing around in the rain skipping up and down from the pavement singing the title song. Apparently he had a cold when he did the scene. That sequence is just a dream.

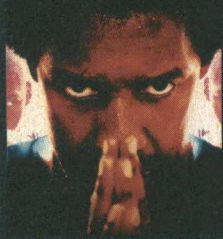

What's your favourite comedy film?
I like Jim Carrey a lot at the moment. I enjoyed Man on the Moon. I'm a massive fan of the late Andy Kaufman [the oddball, ahead-of-his-time comedian, wrestler and star of TV's Taxi] and this is the film of his life. My favourite comedy film of all time is Laurel and Hardy's Sons of the Desert. It's the one where Ollie fakes an illness and they go to Honolulu for a conference, a freemasons' meeting. I also like Tootsie. I think Dustin Hoffman is brilliant in that.

What's your first movie memory?
The first time I went to the cinema I'm pretty sure it was to see Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo. I saw it with my grandmother. All I can remember is that I dropped sweets on the floor.

What about your scariest film?
Digby, the Biggest Dog in the World or The Care Bear Movie or perhaps International Velvet. I'm a comedian. I'm allowed one funny one, aren't I?

● Matt Lucas can be seen as scoremaster George Dawes in Vic Reeves and Bob Mortimer's wacky game show Shooting Stars, UK Play, Monday-Thursday 8.00pm

Top rated: Paolo Di Canio

Compliments of the season

It has been a memorable Premier League campaign, as Sky's football pundits tell

Nick Callow and Marc Isaacs

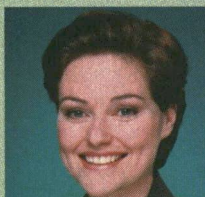

Euro-star: Roy Keane

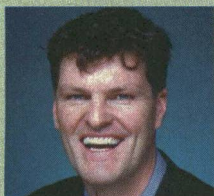

RICHARD KEYS: 'Manchester United's victory at Leeds proved to be very significant in the title race. It meant the other teams started to dip away. It was typical of United to come away from such a massive game with all three points and really stamp their authority when it mattered the most. One of the best players of the season for me has to be Dennis Wise, and he would be my Footballer of the Year. I have long thought he is one of the better players around. Paolo Di Canio's strike against Wimbledon has to be one of the goals of the season.'

CLARE TOMLINSON: 'It has been another exciting season, but a strange one in that so many teams have been inconsistent. With Manchester United so strong, the battle to win the next two Champions' League places has caught my eye, and I tip Liverpool to finish second, with Leeds or Arsenal third. The relegation battle has possibly been more interesting and will probably not be settled until the final day. As for individuals, I am pleased for Kevin Phillips because he was dismissed as a First Division player but has answered his critics by scoring so many goals. Kanu is my player of the year, though, and his third goal at Chelsea is my favourite.'

ROB McCAFFREY: 'This has been yet another great season with some fantastic goals.

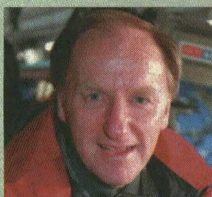

Manchester United have once again set the benchmark and have just got stronger and stronger. It has been great to see the resurgence of teams such as Liverpool, Leeds and Arsenal. I think it has been a season of transition for a number of teams and it all bodes well for the future.

Roy Keane has been the outstanding player for me once again, although Harry Kewell, Lucas Radebe, Sami Hyypiä and Steven Gerrard have all had a terrific season as well. But the most outstanding talent has to be Paolo Di Canio who has been a great entertainer for everyone.'

JEFF STELLING: 'The resurgence of Liverpool and the vibrancy of Leeds have been the major highlights of the season for me. I have enjoyed Graham Taylor and his enlivening optimism on his return to the Premier League. Paul Merson has been fantastic for Villa, and it is no surprise that their revival has coincided with his return to form. My favourite player of the season has to be Paolo Di Canio. You never know what will happen with him next.'

ALAN PARRY: 'The re-emergence of Liverpool has been a highlight for me – no bias, of course, as I am a fan. But it will take them a couple of years before they can mount a serious challenge to United. Leeds have probably been the most exciting team. They deserve to win something this season and have probably exceeded their own and David O'Leary's expectations. Individually, Roy Keane has been fantastic again.

He dominates the midfield and his goalscoring feats have impressed me the most. He has matured as a player and is one of Europe's great midfielders.'

KIRSTY GALLACHER: 'It has been a fantastic Premier League season with many twists, but far more ups than downs. I've been impressed with David O'Leary at Leeds. They are a great young side to watch and in Harry Kewell have one of the most exciting players in the league. Kevin Phillips has also been outstanding for Sunderland and West Ham's Joe Cole has stood out. Manchester United seem invincible, but Gérard Houllier has got my team, Liverpool, going again and it's good to see Newcastle also re-emerging. My favourite individual moment is Paolo Di Canio's volleyed goal against Wimbledon – one of so many great goals this season.'

FA CUP FINAL ASTON VILLA v CHELSEA
Sky Sports 2 Saturday 20th 12noon (k.o. 3.00pm) – LIVE

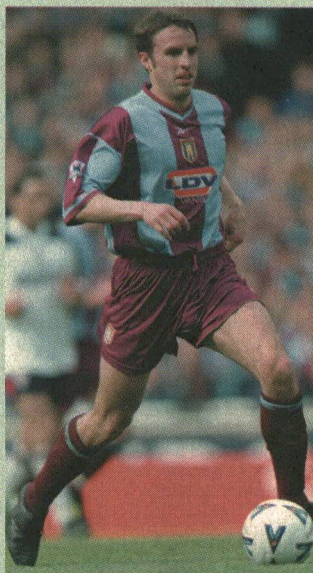

Thriller for Villa

Gareth Southgate tells Gerry Cox why, despite changes to the tournament, leading out Aston Villa for their first FA Cup final for 43 years will be a proud moment

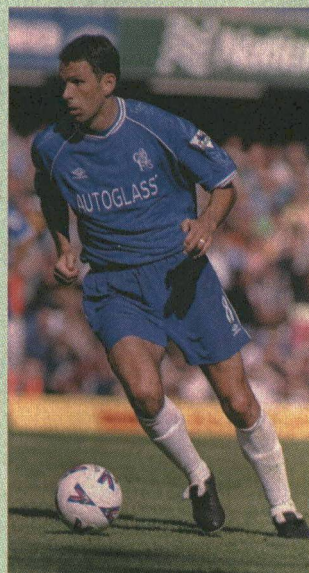

ASTON VILLA captain Gareth Southgate is frustrated at how the FA Cup has been handled this season. Southgate fears the tampering has threatened the status of the world's most famous domestic knockout competition. But the England international defender admits that now he has the chance to lead Villa out against Chelsea at Wembley, he is preparing for potentially the greatest day of his career.

'It has been a strange FA Cup this year,' Southgate said. 'The competition's appeal is due to its sense of tradition, and we have lost some of that this season. 'For a start, the holders Manchester United were not even in the Cup when it started because of the World Club Championship. I know many teams will feel that gave them a better chance of winning the trophy, but, as a professional, you always want to win by beating the best. United's absence didn't totally devalue the FA Cup, but it did take an edge off it. 'Then we found ourselves starting before Christmas instead of in the new year. 'As I recall the attendances were down at that stage, so obviously the supporters did not take to the changes too well either.

'I also did not agree with playing the semi-finals at Wembley. In our match against Bolton there were two sets of fans who had to make a long and expensive journey, and I'm not sure if that was fair on them. When the aim of the Cup is ultimately to win a place at Wembley, it was strange for the players to be walking out there in a semi-final, playing to win the right to return for the final.

'But I am not against the Cup in any way. It is strong enough to withstand a few changes, and it is a great feeling to be there now.

'Villa have not been in the final since 1957, and for a club of our size and ambition that is too long.

'And after all those years of watching teams on television, I will be honoured to get the chance to lead Villa out in front of millions of viewers worldwide, and I hope we can do our supporters justice.

'We know Chelsea will be difficult to beat and it will be a close game. We want to enjoy the day and the best way to do that is by winning.'

Squaring up for a sci-fi nightmare

An enigmatic psychological sci-fi drama hailing from Canada, Cube is the remarkably confident debut feature of Vincenzo Natali. Arriving on a new wave of provocative, intelligent genre works, such as Dark City and π (Pi), this oppressively claustrophobic film – which was shot on a shoestring on one brilliantly designed, repeatedly re-dressed set – turns its paltry budget to impressive advantage. A group of strangers find themselves imprisoned in an apparently endless maze of cubic chambers, some of which are booby trapped. They don't know how they came to be there or why, and there is seemingly no escape. The film takes its cues from such diverse sources as the cryptic Sixties series The Prisoner and The Twilight Zone, especially a 1961 episode called Five Characters in Search of an Exit, in which an army major, a ballerina, a tramp, a clown and a bagpiper struggle to escape from a cylindrical room they have no recollection of entering. It was a memorable instalment whose punchline revealed the characters were children's playthings that had been dropped into a toy donation box. Cube, on the other hand, refuses to offer any easy explanations for its characters' unsettling predicament, and its deeply disturbing atmosphere of nightmarish irrationality is maintained right up to an ending that's open to multiple interpretations.

Sky MovieMax Wednesday 3rd 10.00pm

Goin' south

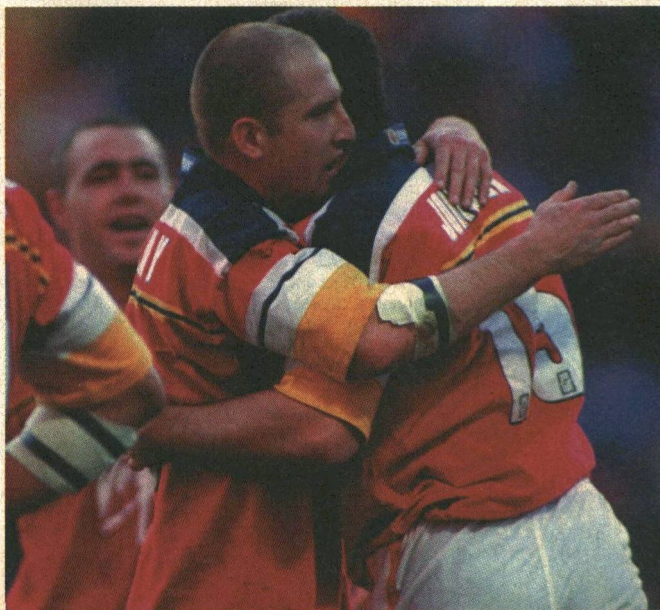

With its defiantly crude do-it-yourself-style artwork, sick humour and foul-mouthed school kid heroes, the adult animated series South Park seems an unlikely contender for a cult phenomenon. But the success of the show, which is wrenched from the wonderfully warped imaginations of Trey Parker and Matt Stone, who also supply most of the voices, has been remarkable. Merchandising possibilities seem endless (South Park characters stare out from t-shirts, mugs, posters, calendars); there have been hit singles, and, like the similarly low-tech, lower brow cartoon hit Beavis & Butt-head, the series has made a triumphant transition to the big screen. The outrageously entertaining movie, South Park: Bigger, Longer and Uncut, even notched up an Oscar-nomination for Best Song (Blame Canada). But all this mainstream respectability hasn't softened the abrasive edge of the series, and this Tuesday fans are treated to a double helping. The first offering sees a genetically engineered clone of Stan unleashed upon the town, while in the second episode, the kids call upon Death himself. Sky One Tuesday 2nd 10.00pm

Super League safari – the Rhinos clash with the Broncos

The Leeds Rhinos stampede towards the capital this Friday to take on the London Broncos at The Valley, where the locals (whose Dean Callaway and Andy Johnson are pictured) are the tenants of Charlton Athletic Football Club. The Rhinos pulled off a league double over the Broncos last season and, to add insult to injury, scooped the Silk Cut Challenge Cup after beating the London outfit 52-16. It will be something of a grudge match for the home side, who will no doubt be hungry for revenge. The Broncos are an incredibly ambitious outfit – they are determined to overcome Southern indifference to this traditionally Northern pursuit, and with the financial muscle of chairman Sir Richard Branson behind them, they should be destined for great things.

The Wolves of Wilderspool have shown signs of improvement this year already with a Challenge Cup semi-final appearance and the signing of Australian legend Allan Langer, as well as the good form of Danny Farrar (pictured, left). However, the Warriors of Wigan are back to their ruthless best under the captaincy of Andy Farrell and with tries from the Great Britain winger Jason Robinson (pictured, right).

THE HISTORY CHANNEL'S LOCAL HISTORY PROJECT

This is a photograph of George Massey, a chimney sweep from Stoke-on-Trent. George was 81 years old when this photograph was taken in May 1987 and he was still working an average of 40 hours a week. George is one of that dying breed of self-employed people whose job has been diminished by advances in clean air, closure of the coal pits and greater environmental expectations of a new age. George said he liked his job a lot but might retire when he reached 90!

LPGA GOLF: CHICK-FIL-A CHARITY CHAMPIONSHIP SKY SPORTS 2 6.00PM, 11.00PM

Karrie Webb is not the only Australian woman who can win big golf tournaments. Just ask Queenslander Rachel Hetherington (pictured, left) who took the Chick-fil-A Charity Championship last year at Eagle's Landing Country Club in Stockbridge, Georgia, when she beat the Canadian Lorie Kane - runner-up for the second consecutive year - in a play-off. The $900,000 event is hosted by the hall of famer Nancy Lopez (pictured, right), who has been a top lady golfer since the late 1970s.

Sensational ★★★ Stimulating ★★ Satisfactory ★

Aries

21 March-20 April ★★
THIS month is make or break time on the relationship front, so start thinking seriously about what you want. Those who have been wary about making any drastic decisions will suddenly feel excited about the prospect of change.

Libra

24 September-23 October ★★
YOU may not welcome interference from loved ones, but you will certainly appreciate their unqualified support. Someone who has been through a similar experience to you may become a powerful ally in the upcoming weeks.

Taurus

21 April-21 May ★★★
THIS is one of your easiest months all year and while events may appear to occur out of the blue, fate is actually working in your favour. Put your ideas into action immediately, then sit back and wait for spectacular results and returns.

Scorpio

24 October-22 November ★★
DO your best to remain detached, despite the efforts of others to draw you into emotional arguments. With a strong tendency for you to lose perspective, it may be wiser to let people fight their own battles this month.

Gemini

22 May-21 June ★★
SOME of you may return to your roots soon, while others rekindle a romantic relationship. Because yours is a dual sign, you often switch allegiances and need more than one person to fulfil your various emotional and physical needs.

Sagittarius

23 November-22 December ★★
LIKE a lamb returning to the fold, you will reinstate yourself in someone's heart or life. Your shot at independence or freedom may have been exhilarating for a short time, but it has probably left you feeling emotionally bereft.

Cancer

22 June-23 July ★★
WITH Venus in earthy Taurus, you should try to keep things simple and cater to your most basic needs. Creature comforts will be very important and there may be an opportunity to turn your creative talents into a money-making venture.

Capricorn

23 December-20 January ★★★
AN unexpected chain of events brings you into contact with people who are unusual or right out of your social sphere. Someone in particular you meet this month may make a strong impression and find a special place in your heart.

Leo

24 July-23 August ★★
WHILE Mars sharpens your wit and tongue, Neptune gives you the gift of good intuition. Not only will this combination make you a popular companion this month, but it helps you stay one step ahead of others in competitive situations.

Aquarius

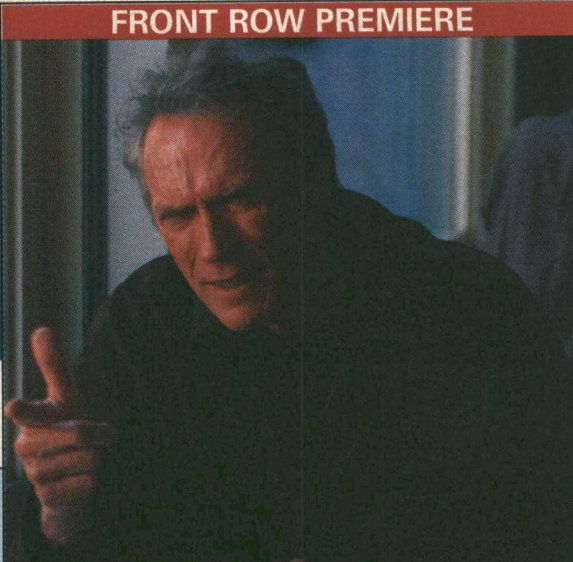

21 January-19 February ★
KEEP the peace at all costs, even when you come across people who are stubborn or pig-headed. Yours is often an inflexible sign and with several planets at the base of your chart, you will be more apt than ever to dig your heels in.

Virgo

24 August-23 September ★★★
PLANS that have been on the drawing board for months are likely to come to fruition soon. For some this means the end of an impasse in their personal life. For others all the hard work and long hours will finally pay off.

Pisces

20 February-20 March ★★
YOU have no way of knowing what the long-term future holds, but you will get a glimpse of what lies ahead for the remainder of the year. Some may make a major commitment soon, while others finally put a past situation behind them.

TENNIS: WTA TOURNAMENT, HAMBURG EUROSPORT 4.30PM

It might be one of the three warm-up red clay events for the French Open at the end of this month, but the $535,000 Betty Barclay Cup in Hamburg is a fine tournament in itself to win - just ask Venus Williams (pictured). The big-hitting American won here last year when she defeated Mary Pierce in straight sets. The Californian's main rivals this year will be the 1998 winner Martina Hingis, plus the indefatigable Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain, who has triumphed here three times.

War is hell

An underrated contribution to the Eighties cycle of revisionist Vietnam war movies, Casualties of War is an unsparing dramatisation of an event that shocked the world when it was reported in 1969. Director Brian De Palma employs an intriguing flashback device by having the story unfold via the dream remembrances of our hero, Eriksson (Michael J Fox). The proceedings open in the present tense, where Eriksson is introduced travelling on a train. He seems disturbed by the presence of an Asian female passenger, and as he sinks into sleep, the film journeys back in time to his tour of duty in Vietnam. We see him as a naive, new recruit assigned to a small unit headed by Meserve (Sean Penn), a hard-bitten sergeant who one day decides to 'requisition' a young peasant woman to provide a morale-booster for his men and help relieve the boredom of a long-range patrol. Despite Eriksson's futile attempts at intervention, his army buddies repeatedly torment and finally murder her. His condemnation of these appalling acts puts Eriksson on a collision course with Meserve, culminating in the climactic court-martial scene. In his most intense dramatic role, Fox supplies a penetrating character study as the conscience of the piece, and there's impressive support from Don Harvey, John Leguizamo and John C Reilly as his fellow grunts. Most captivating, however, is Penn. His grotesquely physical turn as the volatile, tobacco-chomping Meserve might seem unforgivably over-the-top at first (at times he looks as though he's trying to mimic the trademark fractured grin of Robert De Niro, with whom Penn would co-star in the disastrous remake of We're No Angels). But if we consider that the events are being horribly exaggerated as they filter through Eriksson's troubled dream, then Penn's maniacal gurning suddenly makes perfect sense.

The Magnificent 7

Its sun-soaked postcard locations, infectious tunes and air of fun-loving exuberance make the hit kids' series Miami 7 one of the best feel-good propositions on the box. The show charts the mirthsome misadventures of Bradley, Hannah, Tina, Jo, Rachel, John and Paul – better known as Brit Award-winning teen sensation S Club 7 – who have travelled to Miami on the understanding that they will be providing the entertainment at a plush hotel. Instead, the starry-eyed septet find themselves performing for free in a flop house. The popsters – whose hit singles include the impossibly catchy Bring It All Back and the anthemic smash S Club Party – demonstrate a real flair for frothy comedy and fans can expect plenty of great sounds.

Ready, Teddy, go

Last season, Spurs' visit to Old Trafford saw Manchester United secure the first part of a historic treble. This time round, the fixture is the penultimate match of the season, though United look likely to have wrapped up the championship with games to spare. Tottenham's 3-1 win over United at White Hart Lane in October now looks increasingly flattering, as their challenge for a European place has stalled. If selected, former Spurs striker Teddy Sheringham (pictured) is sure of plenty of attention from the visiting fans, who won't need any more reminders of their own side's lack of fire power.

LIVE MANCHESTER UNITED V TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR SKY SPORTS 1 11.00AM  The Premier League title race might have been sewn up by now, but Manchester United (whose Paul Scholes is pictured, left) will take no prisoners against Tottenham led by Sol Campbell (pictured, right) at Old Trafford this morning before another full house. The Londoners have been known to get the better of United on more than a few occasions in recent years and the silky skills of Spurs' David Ginola will easily match those of United's Ryan Giggs. It could be one of United's hardest tests. Boy oh boy! kids

PHILIPPA PROBERT

Westlife have plenty to shout about, not least their role in this year's Disney Channel Kids Awards.

Cable Guide meets up with the boys to find out more

WHAT A YEAR! With their record-breaking first five singles storming straight to the top of the chart, 1999's Record of the Year and the sought-after Christmas number one, you may well wonder how Westlife expect to top such a feat. 'We can't!' smiles Shane. 'There's no way we can beat last year's success. Our ambition this year is to have some hits in America.'

This year also sees Westlife heavily involved in the Disney Channel Kids Awards – not only nominated for two of the awards (favourite group and favourite male group), they are this year's official spokespeople, along with S Club 7. 'It's fantastic for us to be able to do this,' says Kian. 'Last year we were only an act on the show and this year we're the ones promoting it.'

This year's Awards categories cover music, film, TV, sport, computer games and books, and there are plenty of ways that you can get involved, as Nicky explains: 'You can vote at McDonald's, Disney Stores or on the Disney Channel website [www.disneychannel.co.uk] and go along to the roadshows.' The nine Live Tour dates run from 27 May to 11 June – call 0870 1200 140 for more details.

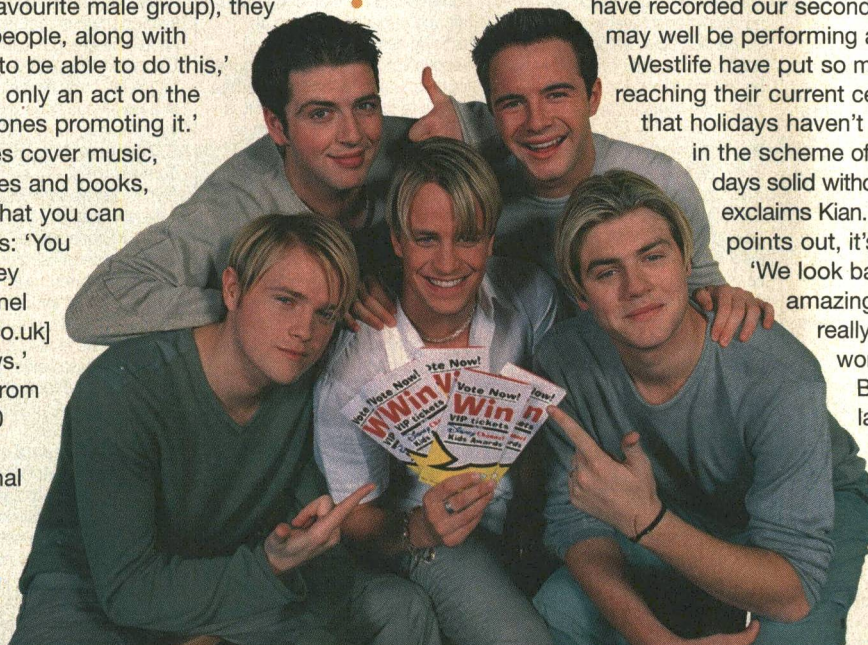

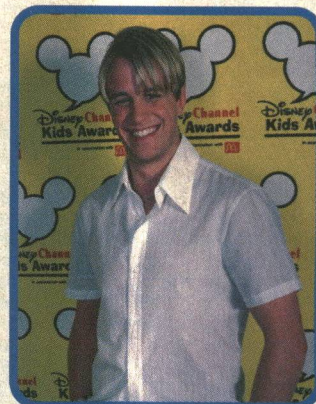

The star-studded Awards Final will take place at the London Arena in September. But bearing in mind their Stateside travels, will the Westlifers be there? 'Hopefully,' says Shane, with his fingers crossed. 'If we are in the UK, we will definitely make it.' There will be a special treat in store for Westlife fans if the Irish quintet do appear on the show, reveals Kian: 'By the time it gets to the Awards show we'll have recorded our second album, so we may well be performing a new song.'

Westlife have put so much effort into reaching their current celebrity status that holidays haven't figured much in the scheme of things. '128 days solid without one day off!' exclaims Kian. But, as Mark points out, it's been worth it.

'We look back at such an amazing year, we're really glad we worked so hard.' But how do the lads wind down and relax when they do get the chance? 'We sleep!' sighs Bryan.

Teens

Being a teenager isn't always easy, but what if you're an alien as well?

Jason Behr talks to Patrick Holm in LA

Behr necessities

ROSWELL HIGH is by far the best thing that I've been involved with. It's just been one wild ride! Jason Behr, 26, is a veteran of more than 75 commercials, numerous stage performances and TV guest appearances, including a major stint in teen angst drama Dawson's Creek, and he's clearly having a great time. He stars as Max Evans, outwardly a normal teenage boy, who hides a mysterious secret – along with his sister Isabel (Katherine Heigl) and friend Michael (Brendan Fehr), Max is a survivor of the crash of an alien spacecraft in the desert near Roswell, New Mexico, in 1947. When he saves the life of human teenager Liz Parker, Max chooses to share his secret with her. Just as other people are starting to become suspicious, their love affair unfolds alongside the drama of the pursuit of the aliens.

'When I first read the script, I thought, "Here's a great idea."

'There are a lot of teenage shows out there right now, but this definitely separates itself from others because of this science fiction spin to it,' Behr explains. 'I immediately responded to the characters and the story. I felt I really wanted to be a part of it.'

The grind of a TV schedule, particularly on a show as effects-heavy as Roswell High, doesn't leave Behr much time to enjoy the sports he loves. 'The producers don't really want you to do too much physical activity,' he says. 'When I get time, I do play basketball. But we're either in the studio or on location, so the free time I do have I spend with my family and friends.'

'There are a lot of teenage shows out there right now, but this definitely separates itself from others because of this science fiction spin to it'

Behr enjoys his work, despite those long hours. 'For me it's all about telling a good story, something that provokes thought and some type of emotion – hopefully positive. I want to work with people that I respect, that I find interesting or intriguing, because you're going to be spending a vast amount of time with them and you want to make the most of it. It would be great if I could spend every day in the sun sitting on a beach in Tahiti, but if it's the middle of the night in a studio in downtown Los Angeles somewhere, it doesn't matter to me. The most important thing is to find a really good story and tell it the best way that I can.'

Playing an alien, Behr is philosophical about the possibility of extraterrestrial life. 'Who knows?' he shrugs. 'I guess the answer is that we don't have an answer. If you look up at night, you realise how insignificant we all are in the grand scheme of things. We have to remain open-minded in our lives, or else we aren't going to move forward.'

Behr's own career seems set to move forward rapidly: his independent film, Rites of Passage, won the Moxie! Award for best feature at the Santa Monica Film Festival in February, and Roswell High is doing well all around the world. 'It's been great,' he enthuses. 'We're not telling a story just about human nature. We're not confined to those rules. We've got alien nature here. We can do whatever we want – pretty much!'

FILM

House of Whipcord
Carlton Cinema 1.00am
A film of singular power, with a perversely deceptive flashback device, this uncompromisingly cruel effort from cult British director Pete Walker tells the story of a bubbly French model who is tricked into entering an illegal correctional facility for females.

GENERAL

Starship Troopers
Sky One 7.00am
While it is necessarily shorn of the extreme violence and dark satire of Paul Verhoeven's sci-fi epic, this excellent animated series owes more to the film by the controversial Dutch director than the Robert Heinlein novel which inspired it.

Vicki's pit stop

Vicki Butler-Henderson
GIRL RACER

WELL I dare not count up the hours I've spent invading your front room, via the TV set, in the past six or so months. Plus I'm not too keen on counting up the miles I've travelled to and from filming locations, either – in case I realise how much money I've spent on fuel and how much of that has gone into the Government's pocket. That's too depressing! As is the amount of days I've spent filming with my co-presenter Steve Berry ... only kidding!

Instead I'll reminisce about the highs and lows of this series. Before me is a list of all the cars I've driven – some of them I don't really remember, others are firmly stuck in my mind, and some I would like to forget.

There was definitely one car that I would not have driven by choice, basically because it didn't have a petrol-powered engine. And I'm not talking diesel-power, either. Firstly, the car in question was pink. Shocking pink. And it was battery-powered. It was a Sparrow PTM (Personal Transit Module, above) and the thing had just one seat and looked like, well, it's indescribable really. I drove it around the very quiet location of Bakewell, Derbyshire, and spent a good couple of hours being pointed and stared at. A pulling machine, it was not.

At completely the other end of the scale was the Westfield FW400 (right). It was a beast of a two-seater sportscar and I got to test it at Oulton Park racetrack in Cheshire. Ah, life's tough. But when I think of the Westfield, I can't help but remember a funny wee thing that happened during filming.

After about half an hour of me giving it a good thrashing, the cylinder head gasket decided to give up the ghost. We hadn't done any tracking shots (where I closely follow another car with the cameraman in its boot filming me driving). The FW400 wasn't in any state to move under its own steam, so we had to tie a tow rope between the two vehicles, and pray. It seemed to work out okay, although I've never done such slow speeds for tracking shots before or since.

Another memorable day was when I took my own set of wheels – a bright yellow Honda Civic Jordan – and put it to the test against Steve on the car's two-wheel version, the Honda Hornet (above). Needless to say the bike was quicker in a straight line because of its superior power-to-weight ratio (and not because of the rider!), but we had a hoot filming it and it was a treat to wang my car to the full on an airfield.

This month sees the end of the current run for Top Gear GTi, but Vicki Butler-Henderson doesn't want you to reach for your tissues. It will be back!

I have to say that it's not just the cars that make my job so lovely – most of the time! There are some great people who work behind the scenes and make the filming days really good fun.

And I'm sure they'll agree with me when I ask you not to have too many Top Gear GTi withdrawal symptoms over the summer!

Top Gear GTi, UK Horizons, Monday 1st, 11.00pm; Saturday 6th, 10.00pm, last episode of series. Then repeated Saturdays, 5.00pm; Sundays, 12noon.

Buggin' out

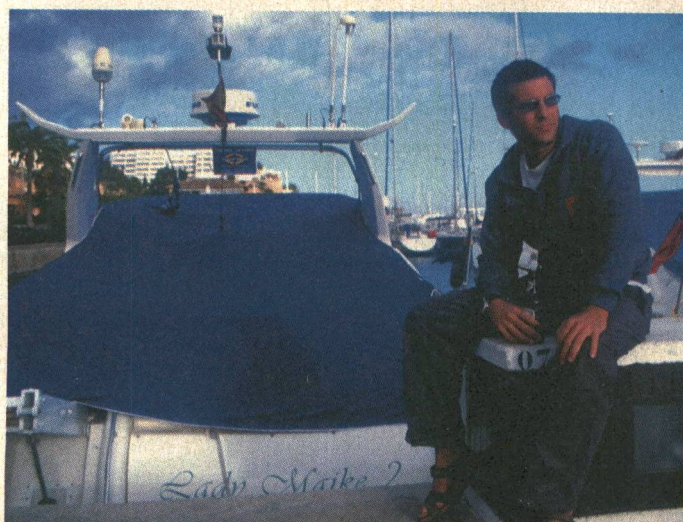

You wait years for a cartoon about insects, then two come along at once. DreamWorks stole a march on Disney with their first animated feature by getting Antz into cinemas before A Bug's Life, and both films have plenty to recommend them. Where Antz really scores is in its ability to appeal to adults as well as children, thanks to a smart script that generates plenty of laughs from the idea of a worker ant struggling to express his individuality. In a clever piece of casting, Woody Allen provides the voice for the restless Z, who owes much to Allen's familiar on-screen angst-ridden persona – in the opening scene he's complaining to a therapist that he's 'the middle child in a family of five million'. And two stars who got early career breaks in Woody Allen movies also feature in the voice cast – Sharon Stone as Princess Bala, and Sylvester Stallone as Z's soldier ant pal Weaver. The cutting-edge computer animation is impressive, too – one memorable sequence finds our hero stuck to the sole of a giant trainer when he sets out in search of the fabled Insectopia. Sky Premier Saturday 13th 8.00pm

Tiger burning bright

This Thursday, the leading international golfers descend on Gut Kaden, Hamburg, to tee off in the Deutsche Bank-SAP Open. Much attention will no doubt be focused on Tiger Woods (pictured), the world No 1 who causes a fairway frenzy at every tournament in which he participates. A player of great focus and determination, Woods has injected a much-needed dose of dynamism into the sport and has become a role model for a new generation of fans. And surely this prodigiously talented player is the only golfer to be immortalised in a movie, The Tiger Woods Story. Sky Sports 1 Thursday 18th 9.30am, 2.00pm – LIVE

Could there be a dream ending to Harchester's nightmare season?

Can Harchester United retain their Premiership status? Find out as Sky One screens an hour-long special of the popular football soap Dream Team. A must-win fixture against Tottenham Hotspur awaits the Dragons (look out for a guest appearance from Spurs keeper Ian Walker), while fellow-strugglers Bradford City take on West Ham United in what should prove a nail-biting finale to a season that has seen more drama off the field than on it. Having endured boardroom battles, the sacking of disgraced manager Jerry Block and even the loss of star players in a plane crash, Harchester are now stuck in a relegation dogfight while, behind the scenes, entrepreneur Prash (Ramon Tikaram) is plotting to wrest control of the club from Lynda (Alison King). And fact became stranger than fiction when Harchester's club captain Didier Baptiste (played by Tom Redhill, pictured) appeared on the nation's sports pages being linked with real-life Premiership clubs! As Jerry Block would agree, it's a funny old game. Sky One Thursday 18th 8.00pm

LIVE SUPERBIKE: WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP EUROSPORT 3.30PM

The Superbike World Championship is well underway and Britain's Carl Fogarty - who is aiming for a fifth title - has been ducking and diving without a great deal of success on his Ducati machine. The early season honours went to the American Colin Edwards on a Honda and Japan's Yamaha-riding Noriyuki Haga. However, today's British race at Donington Park in front of his adoring fans should inspire Foggy to a winning performance and maybe reshape his season.

LIVE TENNIS: WTA TOURNAMENT, ROME EUROSPORT 1.00PM

The Italian Open is not so far behind the four Grand Slams when it comes to prestige in the world of tennis. The tournament, which began in 1930, boasts prize money of $1,080,000, with $166,000 going to the winner. Venus Williams (pictured, left) beat the 1997 champion, Mary Pierce (pictured, right), in straight sets to take the title in 1999 on the red clay of Rome. The women's top prize is so competitive these days that neither Williams nor Pierce are guaranteed to be challenging for the title this year.

LIVE DEUTSCHE BANK-SAP OPEN TPC OF EUROPE SKY SPORTS 1 9.30AM, 2.00PM

Not content with winning almost every tournament he enters on his own US PGA Tour, the rapacious Tiger Woods (pictured) wants to conquer the world. So last season he popped over to Germany for four rounds at the Deutsche Bank-SAP Open and took the first prize of 280,000 euros. Woods will be at Gut Kaden, Hamburg, but top Europeans Colin Montgomerie and Sergio Garcia will no doubt want to claim the title and the 2,700,000 euros prize money for Europe.

OUT OF THIS WORLD

SCI-FI, horror & fantasy

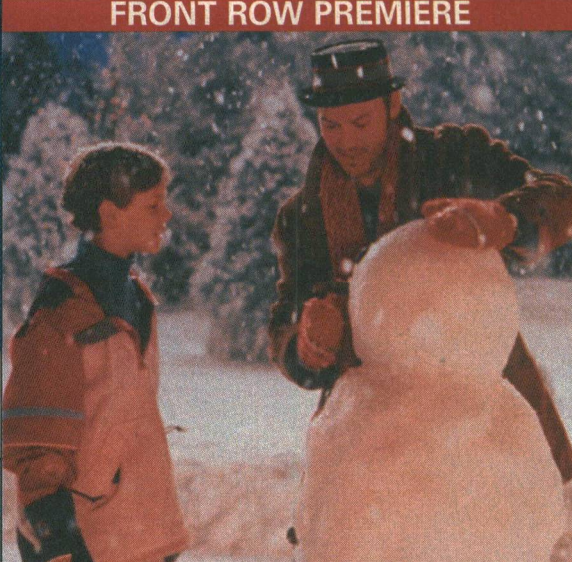

UNIVERSAL BEAUTIES

One is a warrior princess,
the other an exotic half-Borg, but they're both drop-dead gorgeous

GETTING the two most beautiful women in the sci-fi and fantasy world together for a photo shoot was too good an opportunity to pass up. But if you had to choose between the sexy stars, who would triumph? Lucy Lawless and Jeri Ryan obviously have a lot in common, both having captivated viewers playing smart, tough super-confident women – Xena and Seven of Nine. They swapped stories and shared some of the tricks that go with being a sci-fi siren.

Famous for her breastplate and leather, the fearless Xena is an all-action heroine. Seven, at six foot one in her Borg heels and slinky, figure-hugging catsuit, is a stunning and complex character. This is your chance to decide who is number one in the sci-fi babe stakes. Visit the Cable Guide website at: www.cableguide.co.uk and place your vote before 31 May 2000! We'll tell you who takes the honours in Out of This World in July.

Don't miss Xena: Warrior Princess on Wednesdays at 6pm and Star Trek: Voyager on Mondays at 8pm. Watch them both on Sky One

FilmFour 8.00pm
A stylish French thriller in which an opera-loving postman comes to the attention of some gangsters after a mix-up with an audio tape. More an exercise in post-punk cool than pulse-pounding suspense, though it's not without its moments of tension.

Welcome to the ultimate action movie

Forget The Terminator movies and Face/Off – The Matrix is the new bench-mark by which all other action epics must be measured. With this existential sci-fi adventure (which scooped four Academy Awards for its remarkable technical accomplishments, including Best Visual Effects), precociously talented sibling film-makers Andy and Larry Wachowski have succeeded in rewriting the rules of the genre. The brothers are enthusiastic followers of anime – adult-oriented animation from Japan – and it shows. The Matrix is the first to capture the hyper-kinetic energy of anime, and, with the assistance of cinematographer Bill Pope and a huge and brilliant special effects team, the Wachowskis have succeeded in creating images that are unique to the live-action medium. Shot largely in Sydney, the film stars Keanu Reeves as a computer hacker who goes under the alias Neo. He is brought into contact with a mysterious group of rebels led by the sage-like Morpheus (Laurence Fishburne), who gives Neo some shattering information: the world is nothing but an illusory, computer-generated environment known as the Matrix, which holds the human race in bondage. Morpheus believes that Neo is the One, a messianic figure who, it has been prophesied, will free humankind from its cyber slavery, and sets about teaching the youngster to realise his full, superpowered potential. And Neo will need to draw upon all his new and incredible skills to avoid the sinister, besuited Agents (led by Australian actor Hugo Weaving, who chews the scenery to hugely entertaining effect). The Matrix abounds in biblical and literary references and, while the film is prone to taking itself too seriously as it ponders its weighty themes, its urgent pacing, awe-inspiring effects and acrobatic fight sequences ensure the viewer's attention is never allowed to wander. Front Row from Monday 29th – see listings for details

A screen legend is honoured

This week, the History Channel salutes Hollywood legend Spencer Tracy in a Biography special. While he has been acclaimed as one of the screen's greatest performers, the double-Oscar-winning Tracy was refreshingly unpretentious about his craft and once demystified the entire acting process by claiming it was simply a case of 'come to work on time, know your lines and don't bump into the other actors'. But this seeming lack of reverence for his profession belied his commitment to his roles, which he always approached with a commendable degree of sincerity.

The History Channel Saturday 20th 7.00pm

The luck of the Irish?

Ireland and Scotland will no doubt be using their friendly encounter at Landsdowne Road, Dublin, at the end of the month as a dry run for the 2002 World Cup qualifiers, which get under way in the autumn. Neither team garners a great deal of respect, but the passion and pride with which they play should be the envy of many an international outfit. While the host side have not qualified for a major tournament since the 1994 World Cup, they have improved considerably over the last couple of years. Boss Mick McCarthy has fashioned a tight team which lays claim to one of the strongest midfields on the international circuit, with Roy Keane and Charlton skipper Mark Kinsella (pictured) dominating the centre of the park. Scotland have qualified for six out of the last seven World Cups but have failed to stamp their presence on the tournament. Sky Sports 1 Tuesday 30th 7.00pm – LIVE

LIVE HUDDERSFIELD/SHEFFIELD GIANTS V WIGAN WARRIORS SKY SPORTS 1 6.30PM

The merger of Huddersfield and Sheffield did not begin auspiciously in the Super League despite the combined talents of players like the Fijian international Waisale Sotavabua (pictured) in the three-quarters. Their clash with the mighty Wigan Warriors is unlikely to lift the gloom which could descend over Yorkshire this season if the Giants cannot gain some momentum. Meanwhile, the Warriors, led by skipper Andy Farrell and new Aussie sensation Steve Renouf, are this season's team to beat.

Acclaimed by many as the finest B-movie ever made, this pungently paranoid 1950s sci-fi classic – directed with real punch by tough guy director Don Siegel – is a model of economy and tension. Aliens swap the bodies of the sleeping residents of a small town with replicas.

LIVE SUPER LEAGUE: LEEDS V WIGAN SKY SPORTS 1 7.00PM

A clash of the titans tonight as the continually under-achieving Leeds Rhinos entertain the regularly successful Wigan Warriors for more Super League points. Despite winning the Challenge Cup last year, Leeds made a poor start to this season and have seen Wigan virtually disappear out of sight with win after win. Rhinos like Great Britain scrum-half Ryan Sheridan (pictured) need to lift the Yorkshiremen and stop try-machine Jason Robinson scoring for the Warriors.

LIVE SCOTTISH CUP FINAL: ABERDEEN V RANGERS SKY SPORTS 1 2.30PM

The Scottish Cup final may look like a foregone conclusion, but Rangers know that Aberdeen (whose Jim Leighton is pictured, left) are desperate to snatch the trophy from their grasp. A 7-0 semi-final win over Ayr - in which Andrei Kanchelskis (pictured, right) scored - was an emphatic result for the Gers, but the Dons who put on a sound display to ensure their place at Hampden, coming from behind in their semi-final to beat Hibs 2-1, are keen to make up for a season spent fighting relegation.

★ IS THE END OF ROSWELL HIGH?

ROSWELL HIGH is quite simply the best show Sky One has ever broadcast and I have just heard production of the show may be cancelled. It's really upsetting that shows are only around for a few episodes or series and then taken off, leaving devoted fans puzzled and upset. It's time major production companies, Warner Bros. in this case, took notice of what us fans have to say and leave viewers in charge of what gets new episodes or what gets cancelled!

Andy Silman, e-mail

● Congratulations, Andy. You've won £50!

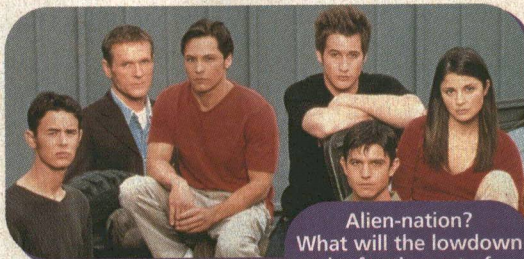

Warner Bros. has moved Roswell (its name in America) to a different time slot in an effort to improve ratings. The WB website (thewb.com) states: 'No announcement on Roswell's future will be made until 16 May, when the network will announce its autumn schedule. The enormous outpouring of support for the show by its fans has certainly had an influence on us and we hope that enthusiasm translates to great ratings.' See our interview with Jason Behr on page 89.

THE LATE, GREAT BOB ROSS

I THOROUGHLY enjoy The Joy of Painting on Discovery Home & Leisure and I think Bob Ross is wonderful. Will there ever be a new series and does he have a fan club I can write to?

Becky Beamish
Dorset

● Sadly, Bob Ross died some years ago, Becky. But his memory lives on around the world and you can rest assured that Discovery Home & Leisure will continue to repeat The Joy of Painting for the foreseeable future. For more information on the series you can write to Langford & Hill Ltd, 38-40 Warwick St, London W1R 5RE. Tel: 020 7437 9945. Or e-mail info@bobross.com for further details about Bob's painting techniques.

LIFE AFTER THE BLUES?

I WAS interested to read the article about actors in old series in April's Cable Guide ['Didn't you used to be in Kojak?']. Do you know what happened to Michael Warren, who played Bobby Hill in Hill Street Blues?

Martin Edwards
e-mail

● Michael, now 54, is currently in the US TV medical drama series City of Angels (created by Steven Bochco, the man behind Hill Street Blues), and he's starred in a host of TV shows and made-for-TV movies as well as feature films.

THE GRAY MATTER

I WRITE in response to Mr B Sutton's letter in April's Viewers' Views, when he asked: 'Am I the only person who dreads my Sunday afternoon football being tarnished by the inane babbling of Andy Gray?' Yes he is! Andy Gray has been around both in the playing and commentary industry long enough to know what he's talking about and, in my opinion, you have to give him his share of the credit for Sky Sports' popularity.

Glen Towers, e-mail

JULIAN AND DENISE: SKY ONE SIZZLERS!

I AM a big fan of Prickly Heat and thought Julian Clarey and Denise Van Outen [right] did a good job. It's been a great second series (I really like the men on the show, especially Gavin from Wales), but sadly I missed a lot of the episodes. Will Sky One be showing any repeats?

Carly Shortman, Bristol

● The second series will be on Sky One again in June.

IT'S STILL OUTSTANDING TELLY (SAVALAS)

MANY thanks to Granada Plus for bringing Kojak back to our screens. I was an ardent admirer of this series in the Seventies and after watching the repeats it still stands up as one of the best American cop shows. Telly Savalas was outstanding in the lead role – a great actor with wonderful sex appeal. I hope Granada Plus shows every episode for people who never got the chance to see it originally, and for die-hard fans like me.

● Granada Plus informs us they have the rights to show every episode of Kojak and it will return in June.

A SOUND SPORTS COMMENTARY?

I CANNOT see the point in having highly qualified and erudite sports commentators when they are unable to be heard above the incessant noise of the enthusiastic crowds.

Surely the commentators could be situated in more sound-proof areas from where their commentary would be more easily heard and understood.

My criticism is directed at the rugby internationals but in many instances it applies to the major club matches.

J D Freedman, Hampshire

● Sky Sports responds: 'There is a fine balance to be met in a live outside broadcast. We try to convey the inherent atmosphere of a major live sports event while obviously endeavouring to convey the pattern of the game through crisp and audible commentary. It's an issue we are constantly monitoring and we are reliant on our viewers to offer their opinions on how this comes across.'

ANGEL MUSIC AND LAWLESS RELATIONS

I HAVE a couple of questions. Who wrote the title music for Angel? Is Lucy Lawless (Xena) related to metal band W.A.S.P.'s front man Blackie Lawless?

Derek Gale
e-mail

● The Angel Theme is by the group Darling Violetta, although the track is now the property of Fox – so look out for the Angel soundtrack! As for Lucy Lawless, she gained her surname from her first husband, Gareth Lawless. Her maiden name is actually Ryan, so it is unlikely that she is related to Blackie. Check out page 137 for our feature on Lucy Lawless and Voyager's Jeri Ryan.

THE DREAM KIT

SKY ONE'S Dream Team is the best football programme on TV. Where can we get the Harchester United football shirts?

Harchester United fans
e-mail

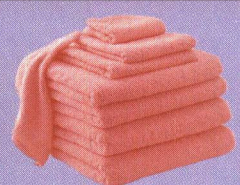

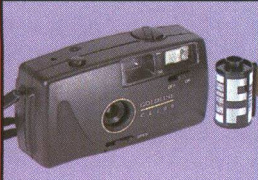

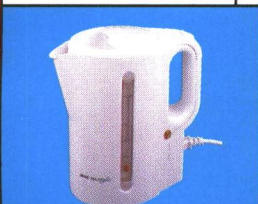

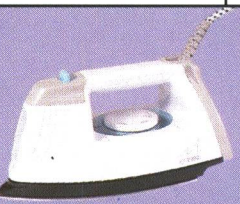

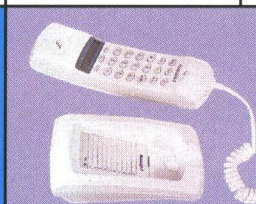

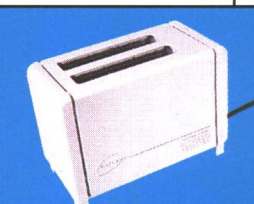

● Sky One tells us that due to demand only kids' size shirts are in stock. Call 0870 608 0315 for details.

'Viewers' Views' may be edited for length.
